A LEGEND OF HISTORY

1927-1977

Middle-aged North begins anniversary with 'Golden Class'

As its first half-century closes, North has settled gracefully into middle age—old enough to be experienced in many matters, yet still at the height of her productive powers.

Some changes in those years have gone full circle: Girls, once cautioned that wearing makeup was in poor taste, were wearing layers of the stuff in the 1950's, only to go back to very little in the last decade. The so-called minor sports and girls' sports faded from the picture but are finding a strong revival.

Other facets of the early years have changed: Male cheerleaders, once customary, have disappeared. The Zollner Pistons, who used the gym as their home floor, have moved to Detroit. Teachers have retired; class officers have become community leaders.

But the building considered unique in 1927 stands relatively unchanged and still eminently useful, as do the educational principles established there in the early years.

The traditions of excellence and service prevail, shown today in National Honor Society and honoraries such as Helicon; sports victories continue to pile up; last year Redskins made up the largest school group to donate blood.

But the most enduring and endearing quality to come from North Side is the pride, loyalty and continued support of its graduates. The Golden Year that begins with the commencement of the Class of 1977 would not hold such rich promise were it not for the Legend of History that preceded it.

Getting together with friends at Sandy's or at Miller's was like going for pizza today.

Horseplay has always had a place in school life, but there is not always a photographer around.

The peaceful riverbank was a haven for students in the early years, as it has continued to be.

Cheerleaders were important to every athletic event, and boys were members of the squads.

Grand finales for students productions in any year gave all an opportunity to show off their specialities and display their talents.

Student players were organized the first year and performed often for appreciative student audiences.

The "locomotive" cheer has endured almost as long as North Side, and is still popular.

Bobby socks (rolled) lots of lipstick, and skirts down to there were typical of coed dress in the '50's.

10,000 visit North in first open house as traditions begin

A crowd of 10,000 who attended the North Side open house on Labor Day, 1927, inspected an "ultra modern" school that was considered a marvel of modern education.

The area's Indian history led to selection of the Redskin nickname and called the building the Big Teepee.

Forty-two teachers and 750 students established traditions that would stay with the school for the next 50 years: The Student Council, the publications, a group of student players, and an honor roll. The first ivy was planted on Senior Day in 1928. A year later, the Senior Banquet was established. Student Council introduced Get Acquainted Day and Courtesy Week, traditions that lasted into the 1950's.

Commencement ceremonies of 1935 were probably the biggest in the school's history. All three high schools-North, South, and Central-participated and almost 10,000 persons attended.

In sports we didn't always have a winning record, but early teams started a fighting tradition that has carried on through the years. The football team over those first nine years won 40, lost 24, and tied 13. The basketball team won two sectional, one regional, and two city championships. The track team won city championships three times and sent individuals to state meets. Swimmers lost 0-3 in 1932, but made a comeback in 1933 and won all four of their meets.

Milton H. Northrop was the first principal. Called "Dad" at first, he later was known affectionately as "Pop." Miss Florence Reynard was dean of girls the first three years and was replaced by Miss Victoria Gross.

Homerooms met for ten minutes every day and had a basketball tournament. The first play was presented in October, 1927.

Mr. Milton H. Northrop, "Pop," guided the school from its beginning through its formative years.

Miss Rowena Harvey, who founded the publications, was a leader in scholastic publications.

The Marching Redskins have served North throughout her years and once broadcast a concert on WOWO.

Gym suits have become more casual, but calisthenics and their timing get the same results today.

Sometimes called "The Princess," Miss Victoria Gross became Mrs. Young during her many years at North.

Growth and war expanded horizons in second decade

North's world expanded in its second decade. The 1939 Legend had as its theme "Service-the happiness of doing," an indication of students' concerns. They had "tin can" hops to collect food for the needy, participated in activities such as Boosters and Student Council to serve the needs of the school, and studied in classes the skills needed for jobs and useful lives. A company in Cincinnati sponsored an essay contest in which the prize was a free trip to the 1939 World's Fair. The essay topic: "The Importance of Solid Fuel in the Development of America's Commerce."

Plans to construct a permanent stadium were outlined in 1939, but they were not carried out completely until the 1970 renovation.

As the country moved into the war years, Redskins did their part, Purchase of war stamps and bonds totaled $150,000 in 1943, enough to buy a pursuit plane which was named "Redskin Raider." Legionnaires gave assemblies on patriotism, and military drill classes held army-type marches. Many former students gave their lives for the country. The school honored them by placing their names on a plaque in the second-floor circle and planting elm trees in their memory in front of the building. A peace day pow-wow marked the end of the war. North students received a minute-man flag for their patriotism and effort in selling bonds.

We had many outstanding athletes from 1938-1947. The cross country team captured the state championship in 1938 and three times in a row from 1942 through 1944. The track team won city and sectional titles in 1939, 1943, 1945, and 1947. The football team won the state championship in 1938.

Girls' sports were popular and competitive. The long jump was called the broad jump then.

A series of girls' one-act plays was presented as part of the Back to School program in 1945.

The skill of ball-throwing was of interest when girls had the Daisies' softball team as models.

Homerooms and organizations had competitions to encourage purchase of war bonds and stamps.

The stadium is named Chambers Field in honor of Rolla Chambers, shown here with the 1943 state champion cross country team.

North's Minute Man flag for patriotic efforts is held by Mr. Northrop and Superintendent Merle Abbett.

'Pop's' retirement relocated stadium marked 3rd decade

Falvey's soda fountain in the brick building next to North became known as Sandy's in the decade that began in 1948, but its function did not change. It was a gathering place, sometimes on the sly during class, and served Redskins even after it became Johnny's. Television, made its impact on society, including Redskins, who participated in local dance and quiz shows.

Clubs increased in number, from 24 in 1948 to 32 in 1954. They scheduled dances and parties on most winter weekends and sponsored booster buses to take fans to away games.

"Pop" Northrop retired in 1953 and was succeeded by O. Dale Robertson.

The stadium, replaced in 1955 by a new one that was given a quarter-turn so the main bleachers would face north, had a seating capacity of 3400 and was named Northrop Stadium. The addition of the retaining wall along the river in 1956 provided a challenge to graffiti artists.

Those years also proved to be exciting in sports. The track team won city and sectional championships in 1948, and added regional championships in 1948, 1953, 1954, and 1955 and state titles in 1956 and 1957. After many years of trying, the football team became city champions in 1953, 1955, and 1956. The basketball team won sectionals in 1948, 1949, and 1953 and played in the state finals in 1955. In 1954 and 1955 the cross country team won sectional and regional crowns.

Of course, the sports were not the only exciting happenings. One event that raised excitement in 1951 was the appearance of Miss America, Yolanda Bethbeze on a Red Cross fund-raising tour.

Mr. 0. Dale Robertson took command as principal in 1953.

Skits in pep sessions have delighted Redskins through fifty years, as this group did in 1954.

She stood majestic by the stream in 1927, and that hasn't changed in her fifty years.

អាអាអា អាអាអ អាអាអ អាអាអា មេជុំក

Teepees and Redskins have always symbolized North and its spirit, as they do here in a 1951 pep session.

The first athletic field had goal posts on the north and south, a situation that changed in the 1950's.

This cross country team accumulated 33 straight wins in the Northeast Indiana Conference in 1952.

Dances almost every weekend were climaxed by spring proms, and North once had two each year.

Large enrollments two retirements mark fourth decade

The building was getting crowded as the fourth decade began. Student Council established a system of one-way stairs to reduce the traffic jams as classes passed, and in 1958, space was added by making a cafeteria out of the storage space and rifle range under the dome and converting the third-floor cafeteria into classrooms that became the 340 wing.

By 1959 the enrollment had climbed to 2045. It remained up, even though the opening of junior highs removed the ninth graders in 1962, until the opening of Snider in 1965 removed 500 students. The 2300 enrollment in 1964 represented an all-time high. Classes began at 7 a.m. and ended at 4 p.m. and were scheduled in three shifts. All study halls were eliminated, and students were expected to do their studying at home. Johnny's closed for good in 1964, and for several years Mr. Don McClead's art classes met in the building facing State Street.

Dr. Bill C. Anthis became principal in 1963 upon retirement of Mr. Robertson. In 1965, Mrs. Victoria Gross Young, who had been a dean since 1930, also retired.

This decade saw the growth of a new tradition, collecting items for the Christmas Bureau. Key Club worked to raise money for building tennis courts, but this was not accomplished until the major renovation in the next decade. However, golf and swimming were added as varsity sports in 1962, and by 1966 the swim team were city champions. The track team won state crowns in 1963 and 1965, were runners up in 1966, and were regional champions in 1962. The football team became city champions in 1964 and finally beat Elkhart for the first time in eight years. The basketball team were runners up in the state tournament in 1965, then won the sectionals in 1966.

Unique learning experiences often were the result of friendly teachers who could enjoy a joke.

A new cafeteria materialized under the dome although the pillars appeared to interfere.

Participating in the major musical or dramatic production was often the highlight of the year.

Teams from city school competed scholastically when quiz shows came to television.

Renovation signals attitude changes, new commitments

Social upheaval in the nation in the last decade had its parallels at North. As students became more involved in the causes of the day or took part-time jobs, they spent less time at school. Participation in activities dropped, and dances and class parties all but disappeared from the scene. So many students drove to school that parking space was rare.

The decade also brought a $5 million renovation from 1970 to 1972. Though North appeared the same on the outside, it changed radically within. Ceilings, walls, the heating system, windows, doors, stairs, and the gym were improved; locker and storage rooms were included in the new stadium; the industrial arts, music, library, and study areas were relocated.

Redistricting made headlines in 1971. The resulting resentment spilled over at North in 1973, and efforts were concentrated on learning to work together for common goals. That brought new community involvement, renewed pride and spirit, and revived clubs or brought new ones that are working together to prepare for the anniversary.

In 1972, Dr. Bill C. Anthis resigned his post to Mr. Max Updike, who was in turn succeeded by Mr. Daniel Howe in 1974.

In 1968 the cross country team won state. The varsity basketball team was regional winner in 1969, 1970, 1975, and 1976, and sectional winner in 1971, 1972, and 1973. The team set a scoring record in the 101-99 game with Wayne in 1973, which took five overtimes to complete. The boys' tennis team won sectionals in 1969 and the city crown in 1968, and the girls' team won sectionals in 1975 and 1976. The women won the volleyball sectional in 1975.

Spirit and pride remain high as Redskins in the school and in the community prepare for a golden anniversary. The introduction of Homecoming as an extension of the traditional Spirit Week signals renewed enthusiasm for the second fifty years.

The delightful result of a tournament victory is cutting the net, a frequent North experience.

Mr. Max Updike had been assistant principal before becoming principal in 1972.

Commencements have outgrown the building, and the golden one will be at the Coliseum.

Basketball continues to be a favorite sport and pastime with varsity athletes and fans.

A permanent stadium that began as a dream in the 1930's was not a reality until the 1970's.

Construction noise and warnings were part of the school day in the renovation period.

Big-cast musicals featuring the fine arts department have become a feature of the 1970's.

Victorious teams were congratulated in assemblies, as was the cross country team in 1968.

Even faculty groups participated frequently in the Varsity Varieties sketches of the 1950's.

The newest of North's five principals, Mr. Daniel Howe, performs the traditional duties.

"Chief Mac," the latest personification of the Redskin, performs good luck ceremonies.

Falvey's—Sandy's—Johnny's served Redskins as a gathering place for three decades.

Now called "team," the locomotive cheer is still a favorite, as are cheerleaders.

Even coaches' wives and players' mothers join in the fun of pep sessions.

For another anniversary, this skit celebrated the 100th year of the school system.

North Side High School 475 East State Blvd. Volume 49

1977 remembered as the Golden Year

Exciting and wonderful times seem to fly by and disappear all too fast. One moment the elation and thrill is there so explosive, the next minute it's past, only a vague memory tucked away to treasure on some rainy day.

Over the past year we have shared many wonderful and often sad times ... the early morning traffic rush, the small conversations in the hall, the excitement of spirit week, the all-school assemblies for Student Council, the tears of losing that one special game, the thrill of three snow days in a row, little passing smiles that mean so very much, and those friendships made which will last a long time.

All of these make up the school year, and they never seem to change no matter how long a school exists. Fifty years have passed since the school opened its door in 1927. As we prepare to celebrate this anniversary we can really be proud of a job well done. Our school has been prominent down through the years, and a lot of history has happened inside our walls. This is the year that will be remembered by all as "The Golden Year."

Senior Warrell Simmons cuts down the net after North Side overcame 4 teams to win the Holiday Tournament.

Juniors Lolita Russell, Janet Whitmore, Kathy Lung, and Brian Konger stop and have a little fun before heading for home.

One student takes a breath and concentrates on his paper. This must be his favorite class.

North Side fans are overjoyed as the game ends, and the Redskins win the holiday tournament.

Our traditions begin, disappear

Traditions have come and gone with the passing of years. Although the seniors still enter the first pep session walking down the red carpet, the senior door, once a prominent part of the senior year, has disappeared. The grand tradition of initiating incoming sophomores has also died somewhat. One tradition new to North was the homecoming celebration. Senior Jan Powers was chosen as Homecoming Queen, and her court was made up of two girls from each class: Tammy Moreland, Sandy Miller, Tammy Wolfe, Lisa Traylor, Jill Sylvester, and Diane Talarico. Here's to traditions!

Senior Sandy Miller, escorted by Tim Zimmerman, was elected for the senior court. Tom Kaufman, in the background, escorted senior Tammy Moreland.

The Marching Redskins have been a tradition since the school started. The band performs here in the summer.

Each day contains waiting, studying

Making extra time go faster or just taking a break is all part of a school day. Some students prefer roaming halls, while others enjoy taking a rest off is some secluded spot of their own. Others can't wait for a quiet spell in the library with their history reports. Students enjoy many different things and individual personalities emerge as you watch some of the students in the halls. Between classes is a good time to get together for a chat, while time during class may be used for studying or even making up work that you have missed. Whatever it is you like to do best with your time, you're sure to find someone around who enjoys doing it too.

An everyday routine for students is the wait in line, but it's worth it.

These juniors enthusiastically await the start of their first period English class with Mr. Pugh.

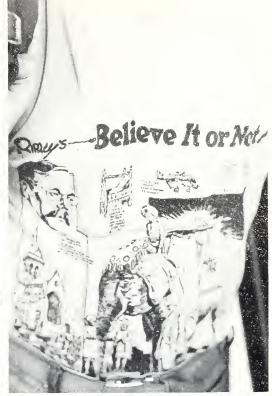

Mr. Record, drama instructor, is showing his great capacity for patience.

Senior Lisa Phillips wants to know if Leonardo De Vinci really started this way.

Ripley's Believe it or Not seems to have become quite popular, although some may not believe it.

Dennis Cuney relaxes in his own fashion to use up some free time before classes start.

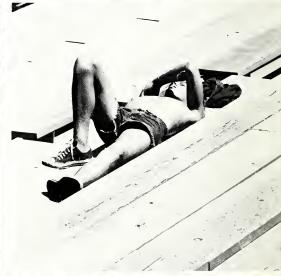

Making up work that's been missed is a lonely prospect unless there's someone else who needs to make up work at the same time.

Practice the key to perfection

One-two, one-two-three. It's slow and tedious but that's the way to start out when you first begin to learn something. Practice makes perfect, or so they say, but sometimes it seems like the practicing will never end. Football players to band members must all start the same, learn the basics then practice, practice, practice. Ask anyone who is good at anything how they got there and their reply will most likely be "practice!"

Summer was a time of fun in the sun and football practice. Here Sophomore Mark Daniels seems to be questioning the logic of it all.

Football practice can be grueling. Here several members of the team display their co-ordination by jumping over tackle dummies.

Senior Darlene Lasley proves once again that girls are not all sugar and spice as she practices for the senior powder puff football team.

Sophomore Jill Sylvester practices her clerical

The band practices hard to perform its routines as exactly as possible.

Gary Lankford, Kathy Lee, Pam Levy, and Greg Nichols work on a scene from the play "The Matchmaker."

The varsity cheerleaders get some assistance from junior Andy Burke and senior Sterling Hartzog.

Chief Mac does his dance before every home game to help get the fans cheering.

The football team gathers in the center of the gym during a pep session to show that they have spirit.

Rebirth of Spirit heightens year

Spirit was evident throughout the entire year. A rebirth of excitement, of wanting to yell at pep sessions and going to games was experienced. More students than ever were involved in activities, and they really seemed to care. Part of this excitement was brought on by the sophomore class, who broke all tradition by winning the spirit peace pipe at the first pep session.

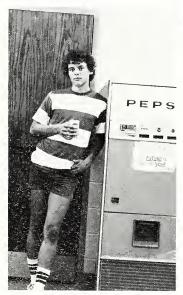

Varsity cheerleader Carol Werling prays for a victory on the sidelines at a home game.

Enthusiastic pep sessions like this are great spirit builders for the team and school.

A familiar sight to all Redskin fans, $\ensuremath{\mathsf{Mr}}$ Gruver leads a cheer.

Activity varies along with seasons

As the seasons tend to change, so do the students' moods and activities. When the school year starts out in fall, the students tend to be enthusiastic. They enjoy sitting out on the grass or walking through the leaves. Then winter steals upon us, and those lingering students quicken their steps. Snowballs whiz through the air, and prayers go up for the closing of school due to weather. With the warmer weather of spring comes the rain and its puddle splashing. Practice season starts with the coming of summer and while some students are taking it easy, others are working hard to get ready for the next year and its activities.

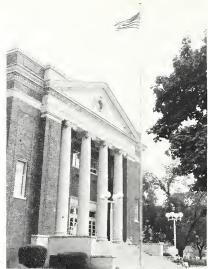

Students enjoy sitting on the steps during the fall months of school, remembering the fun they had that summer.

Fighting the glare of the sun, these loyal fans enjoy the North Side Relays.

This view from the window in the 330 corridor displays some of the snow this winter gave us. Cold weather and snow gave students a few free days.

Senior Ann Sherman, accompanied by a friend hurries into the building before the spring rain turns into a downpour.

Snowball fights begin with the falling of snow. Even without mittens, its still a lot of fun.

Sophomore Terri Borten and a friend take advantage of the warm fall air to relax. $\label{eq:continuous} % \begin{center} \b$

'People' Studies join government

Everyday life in the United States and other countries proved to be main topics covered by the Social Studies Department.

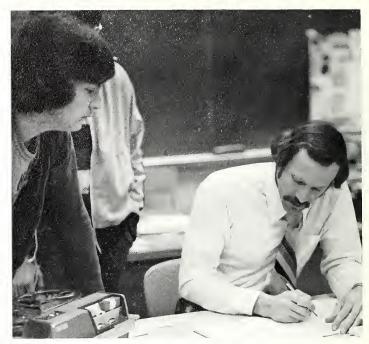

Criminology, a popular class that students took great interest in, dealt with famous crimes. U.S. History students spent time working on the election and doing volunteer work for the election polls. They also spent time studying the stock market.

Psychology, a new course, covered different fields of thought or theories of psychology. Students spent the year studying ESP, telepathy, psychokinesis, and personality development.

Anthropology generally covered the evolution of man. To understand this more, students did a project called "Dig", where groups of students made up their own culture. Then other students tried to figure out the different groups' culture.

Society and its effort on people and interaction with each other were some of the topics covered in Sociology.

Government students devoted quite a few hours hastily scribbling notes, reading, and watching films in an effort to learn how their government works.

The stock market game is one method of showing students not only how the market works, but also what brought the depression on. Here students line up to buy stock.

Members of Mr. Bierbaum's fifth period anthropology class put together a puzzle of a skull.

Senior Anita Salazar gets a closer look at these wanted posters, which are a part of a display in the criminology room.

The Boston Strangler and his victims are just one of the topics discussed in Mr. Heath's criminology class.

A.C. Eldridge leads a class discussion on the various types of personalities during sociology class.

 $\mbox{Mr.}$ Myron Henderson uses the overhead to explain more thoroughly how the court system of the United States is set up in a pyramid.

Junior Kurt Benya takes notes in his history class as $\ensuremath{\mathsf{Mr}}.$ Evans writes them on the board.

English offerings add college prep

College prep English classes on all three grades were added to the department, and the reading classes were continued for the second year. The block classes and magazine class were well established and continued.

The 12 teachers had classes that averaged 28 students each. Mrs. Helen Solero was new to the department. Mrs. Susan Boesch served as a full-time substitute for Mr. Lewinski, while Mrs. Kathleen Neuhaus became department

Students elected either the A or B block, according to their interests and needs. In each class, they worked on building the basic communicating skills: Reading, writing, and speaking. Emphasis was put on grammar and writing as well as building reading skills and the study of literature. Students discussed their writing and had it evaluated.

Sophomores worked on understanding the types of literature, juniors concentrated on American literature, and seniors studied English and world literature

The reading classes concentrated on reading and writing skills, and the magazine class produced two publications.

In this sophomore English class, teacher Mr. Fred Humphrey works on teaching poetry, one of the types of literature sophomores learn.

Mr. Robert Pugh does a part from "Midsummer Night's Dream" for entertainment in one of his English classes.

Mrs. Solero, in college prep/English, explains to one of her senior classes how important grammar can Junior Derek Booker is researching sports sections from years gone by. Journalism students must research facts as well as write.

Journalists learn many useful skills

Students in all levels of journalism worked on developing the ability to find information, organize according to interest, and write it in a way that will be useful to others.

Beginning journalists studied the basic writing forms and practiced them by working on one of the publications. They studied how to improve sentence structure, build specific vocabulary, and organize material logically. They also learned the skills of editing and layout and studied the laws of the press.

Advanced journalism students had positions of responsibility on one of the publications or worked on other special projects, such as historical material or photography. They had to demonstrate creativeness, responsibility, and promptness in their work.

Nancy Headford, a sophomore, uses the dictionary to look up some word that is causing her problems.

Sonja White checks the copy of The Northener which has been posted with the staff's mistakes marked. This will help to improve her next story.

Speakers practice to get confidence

"To gain confidence in yourself was the number one priority this year," reported Mrs. Claryn Myers of the speech program. But she added, "To learn to communicate and understand the people around you was also important."

Mrs. Myers taught one class of speech in which sixteen students were enrolled. The class tried as many kinds of speaking as they could fit in. Examples are a sales talk, demonstrations, storytelling, debates, a group discussion, impromptu, and a speech to inform.

"If a new idea hit me, I added it to our program," explains Mrs. Myers, "We didn't have too many films. There just weren't enough to hold a student's interest."

"Nine weeks of speech for sophomores as a required class would be a great help for everyone," and to that she added, "After all, not wanting to be embarrassed in front of your peer group while speaking is a problem shared by all ages."

Tom Terrell and Mrs. Myers practice one of the many ways of expressing yourself in a speech.

Sharon Menson, Kathy Allen, and Kelly Hammond give Maverick Russell their attention as he runs through his vocal exercises in Mrs. Myers' class.

A speech class does a little group practicing on their own. The whole group serves as critic for whomever is speaking.

Students learn through observation the art of putting on makeup as demonstrated by Marie Barker in Mr. Record's stagecraft class.

Kevin Lewis and Tom Williams engage in a little dramatic reading while in Mr. Record's room, better known as the mini-theater.

'Everyone unique' in drama: Record

Of the 125 students in drama and stagecraft, most were in drama.

"Everyone is unique and all have something unique to contribute; there is never a dull moment," said Mr. Lincoln Record, instructor.

Seventy-five percent of the drama grade was based on performance. This included participation in class and projects such as doing cuttings from a play, designing costumes, or learning how to work stage lights. The remainder of the grade was based on attendance.

"We worked on school plays: a comedy, a mystery, a musical, and a night of one-acts," he adds, "We also toured the elementary schools with a play."

People from the community were brought in to speak to the classes on writing a play and many other aspects of stagecraft and drama.

"We wanted to build on tradition and strive to make North a leader in communications," Mr. Record remarked.

Terry Smith and Tony Hines indulge their efforts as actors, practicing lines from a play in drama class.

Musicians discover variety in offerings

The music department sold calendars, lightsticks, and wreaths to pay for uniforms and instrumental equipment.

Both concert and varsity bands, directed by Mr. Edward King, worked on modern popular and symphonic literature and participated in various concerts.

Rehearsal Stage Band worked on learning winat jazz is all about and how to read time charts. The jazz band, or Wildsiders, compete in Nisbova for best performance, best soloist, and sweepstakes awards. Pep band played for pep sessions and varsity home games.

The Marching Redskin band marched at festivals and received a one rating at Nisbova, which sent them to the state contest, where they were rated number 10

Mrs. Janet Holloway's choir classes worked on patriotic, spiritual, and popular music.

The orchestra class worked on classical, popular, and patriotic music. The varsity, training, and A'Cappella choirs performed most of the evening concerts.

Fine arts class is made up of sophomores, juniors and seniors and includes dramatics, art, stagecraft, vocal music, instrumental music, and music theory.

Electronic music was open to juniors and seniors who work on electronic sound and the use of the synthesizer and multipe tape recorder.

Music theory consisted of junior and senior choir members. They studied basic harmony, sight-reading and ear training.

Mr. John Hill's troubadours are made up of 50 selected outstanding singers. Madrigals are selected from the troubadours for their intonation, self-confidence, performance poise, and sight-reading abilities.

During their study hall, Duane Reynolds and Jacqui Judd have some fun with their trumpets. They are accompanied by a friend on the drums.

Concert band, under Mr. King, is taking a breather while the trumpet section puts some finishing touches on a selection.

Sophomore Debbie Tarr gets tired, stiff, and aches when the orchestra practices last long. But the sounds they create make it worthwhile.

Mrs. Holloway directs an orchestra that has to its credit several members of the All-City Orchestra and an All-State members.

Talented voices are common in the A'Cappella Choir. Daily they perfect their musical selections for the Christmas Concert.

Foreign languages help with English

The 325 persons enrolled in foreign languages had a chance to get involved in several activities. Social events were planned for after school or evening. These included field trips for cultural programs, meals in ethnic restaurants, movies from Mexico or other foreign films, and AFS International Day.

More emphasis was put on day-to-day language situations, such as reading road signs, asking and giving directions, and ordering dinner. Procedures for travel by plane, train, bus, and subway were also emphasized. Students were encouraged to tune in to helpful TV programs.

French, Latin, and Spanish were taught from the first through fourth year. Foreign language culture was taught by Mrs. Sherry Gerber.

Mr. Beckley, Latin teacher, believes, "Latin makes English and English grammar much easier to learn." Mrs. Ransburg, French teacher, added, "Any foreign language helps students get interested in how words in our language are similar to words in whatever language they study.

As the period draws to a close, Mr. Beckley lets his Latin students sit and chat among friends while he is discussing a few things with one of his colleagues.

Carolyn Ashley and Kathy Lung study a wall hanging with great interest in Mrs. Gerber's fourth period Spanish class.

Jeff Altevogt's face reflects understanding as he hears Spanish on the headsets which teach the students to pronounce Spanish words.

Heating chemicals and waiting for a reaction are part of chemistry for Mark Howley and Peggy Kirkpatrick.

Science 'fantastic' say instructors

The science department is wide and varied in offerings. As one science teacher puts it, "Any science is a fantastic course to teach; it changes every year as new discoveries are being made."

Courses included Advanced Biology, Ecology, Chemistry, Physics, Earth Science, Physical Science, and Advanced Science.

"To prepare students for college with advanced study habits and lab skills," Mr. Slavens commented, was his purpose. "Most students who take advanced biology or courses such as chemistry and physics are headed towards college."

An important purpose in the ecology and earth science classes is to help students be more aware of the environment and its problems so that they may vote intelligently on environmental issues.

In the Science Department, nearly every class is graded partially on lab experiments. Grades are also based upon special projects.

Junior Martha Borg cleans out one of the hamster cages in Mr. Slavens' Advanced Biology class. The students do a lot of work with animals.

Mr. Rice's physics class is doing one of their many experiments. In this one they are testing the speed of a Rice-mobile coasting on a flat level surface.

Something for all is Home Ec goal

"Home Ec is a great field," said new teacher Mrs. Dorothy Coplen, "Every fellow and girl becomes a homemaker; it's very practical." Crepes, casseroles, shirt sleeves, Christmas cookies, pants and needlepoint were all part of the food and clothing programs. Nutrition seemed to bog students down, but basically they were very enthusiastic, especially when it came to eating their projects! A turkey buffet served for some of the faculty was a second year project.

Home economics has another side, as Mrs. Martha Goncalves, human development teacher, will tell you. How to spend your money, energy and time or home management as well as interior decorating are two facets of this area. A new course, Singles Living, and the wellestablished Human Development analyzed the problems of marriage, living alone, pregnancy, budget, child development and knowing yourself. In the spring students brought in 4-7 year olds for a "play-school." They observed, taught and related with applying all they had learned.

Mrs. Copien, Home Ec teacher, with the help of Sophomore Judy Buckmaster, goes over how to make hush puppies and apple fritters.

Lynn Holliday, a junior, is going through some house magazines looking for plans in Mrs. Gonclaves' Single Living class.

Mrs. Coplen lends a hand to sophomore Derrick Bragg as he adds the finishing touches to a dish during Home Ec lab.

Sophomore Mike Rodenbeck is drawing a two-point perspective house with his time in beginning art class.

Emphasis in art builds enthusiasm

"You don't need talent," says art teacher Mr. Ken Biberstein. Enthusiasm is all that's needed for taking a course in art. Beginning art has an emphasis on drawing skills and ceramics. "This department has grown tremendously," said Mr. Biberstein, smiling with pride. More leisure time and a change from academics was responsible for the increase in students. Advanced art classes had the opportunity to visit Chicago's Art Institute, in between weaving, sculpture, and even making jewelry. Forty-four people went. "It was good visual stimulus as well as an opportunity to see Chicago," stated art teacher Bruce Massoth.

Some of the advanced students were working in photography at McJon's as career opportunities. The fourth year classes prepared college portfolios as well as worked in movie-making. Future plans mentioned by Mr. Massoth included expanding the program with a special photography class and also better display areas where students could show off their projects.

In Advanced Art Susan Hartzell, a senior, is half-hitching a macrame which she is just beginning.

Senior Kathy Ohneck works on some two-point macrame during her art class. A classmate's art is nearer completion.

Business courses offer experience

The Business Department was one of the largest according to Mr. Dale Goon, department head.

Sixteen different courses are being offered, including Accounting, Shorthand, Clerical Practice, Employment Preparation, Recordkeeping, Introduction to Data Processing, Typing and Secretarial Practice.

Students in Distributive Education covered various phases of marketing as well as on-the-job training. Like D.E., COE, Cooperative office Ed. also has on-the-job training for students in offices of local business firms. C.O.E. helps close the gap between school and the world of work.

Business Communications this year helped students write business letters and other business communications.

Students in Business Arithmetic covered basic business problems. Students learned how to deal with economic checks, balancing, investments, and how to get the most for their money.

Business Organization and Management covered the problems of being a worker or an owner of a business. Students were given problems to solve in all areas of business.

Business Law was taught through discussing questions, looking at legal papers, and discussing law as people live it.

Junior Judy Herman and Senior Tina Mansfield work to complete their typing projects in Miss Virginia Ayres' Advanced Typing class. The scores on these projects make up a large part of their grades.

Senior Becky Cox and Junior Becky Young are working on duplicating machines in the Service Center.

Seniors Tim Nix, Becky Johnson, and Keith Durbin collect money during class from the students participating in selling candy to raise funds for their D.E. Club.

Senior Lisa Norton works on building her speed up in advanced shorthand using headsets.

Mechanical Skills useful in homes

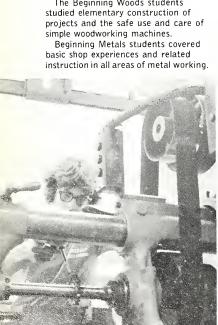

Courses taught in the Industrial Arts Department are not vocational in nature. The 420 students enrolled are getting a taste of vocational material, but will use it mostly to broaden their educational background and to learn to do things that will be needed in their homes and lives.

Students in Electronics covered theories involving skills in the field of electronics through construction of various projects.

Power Mechanics students took apart combustion engines, which include lawn mowers and automobiles. They also studied basic electricity and electric motors of all types.

Drafting, a basic technical drawing course, took students through organized skills in an industrial manner. Students also learned to read and interpret blueprints.

The Beginning Woods students studied elementary construction of

In this power mechanics class Ken Fenker is hard at work tampering with a simple motor. The class has spent great amounts of time learning how it operates.

Barry Gore sets up a metal lathe as a classmate watches and offers advice and help.

Tom Ceaser is sanding down a ring in metals shop.

 $Mr.\ Robert\ Edwards,$ woods teacher, is explaining the use of a bar clamp in the making of a stool to Joe Neuhaus and Don McKee.

Assuming a comfortable position may be part of Chris Felger's concentration, as she sands a jewel box.

Junior Lisa Traylor is hard at work drawing a house plan for a drafting project.

Phys Ed is start to lifetime sports

All sophomore gym classes were changed to co-ed, which was a new experience for some of the teachers as well as the students.

The main objective for the physical education curriculum in the sophomore classes is to introduce the students to individual team sports with an emphasis on lifetime sports. A few of the sports taught are rugby, archery, badminton, field hockey, and soccer.

The advanced gym classes were offered a wider variety of sports and activities. Students usually picked their own sports and then tried others that their teachers might require. Some of the things the advanced classes participated in were bowling, ice skating, scuba diving, and pool.

A new program in advanced gym enabled students to go to the elementary schools to help the gym teachers in their classes. The program was designed to give students a little insight into what teaching a gym class might be like.

Miss Donnelley's fifth period class demonstrates how to play field hockey. Players are Randy Derrow, Dennis Cuney, Bill Hobbs, Terry Lake, Ramona Hartzog, and Debbie Fryback.

The study of each sport is preceded by an explanation of techniques. Miss Donnelley explains the rules of field hockey to her class and answers a question a student has asked.

 $\mbox{Mr. Walder's fifth period gym class is on the tennis courts. Gerrie Baur is attempting to make a good return.$

Miss Donnelly's gym class is concentrating on doing some exercises.

Mr. Walder's physical education class is working out in a soccer game, fun when the field is dry and the temperatures mild.

Sam Leto is trying his hand at tennis as his partner, Brown, watches.

Math teachers seek fun, understanding

The 770 students that were enrolled in math courses this year had a wide variety of eight courses to indulge themselves in.

The teachers' number one objective was to get the students to enjoy math more than they did before. They also hoped students would get more out of math and gain a better understanding of their courses.

Advanced algebra is a class designed to continue along with the same ideas that were introduced in Algebra $1\ &\ 2$.

Basic Math is a class for the student with serious mathematical deficiencies. The major topics discussed were addition, subtraction, multiplication, and division of whole numbers, fractions, and decimals.

Fundamentals of Algebra is a continuation of the concepts taught in Fundamentals of Algebra 1 & 2

Fundamentals of Geometry is a course for the students who have done well in the Fundamentals of Algebra. Work with the compass, ruler, and protractor is emphasized.

General Math continues with the topics of the other general math course, and simple topics from algebra and geometry are introduced.

In geometry the concept of proof and properties of geometric figures are introduced.

Survey Math introduces students to higher mathematical ideas, using simple math. The course does not include computational skills. The goal of this course is to show that math can be interesting.

Trigonometry and analytic geometry is a course for the student who has done well in advanced algebra. The majority of the students taking the course are planning a career in the physical or social sciences, business, medicine, or engineering.

Mr. Stauffer cleans off the overhead projector while his students wait for the next illustration of their math lesson.

 $\ensuremath{\mathsf{Mr}}.$ Liechty checks over Janet Whitmore's shoulder in Advanced Algebra.

Mr. Hey explains to his trigonometry class about the concepts of cosines and their practical applications into formulas.

 $\mbox{Mr.}$ Hector Gonsoleves, and Jimmy Fincher work together in the learning center.

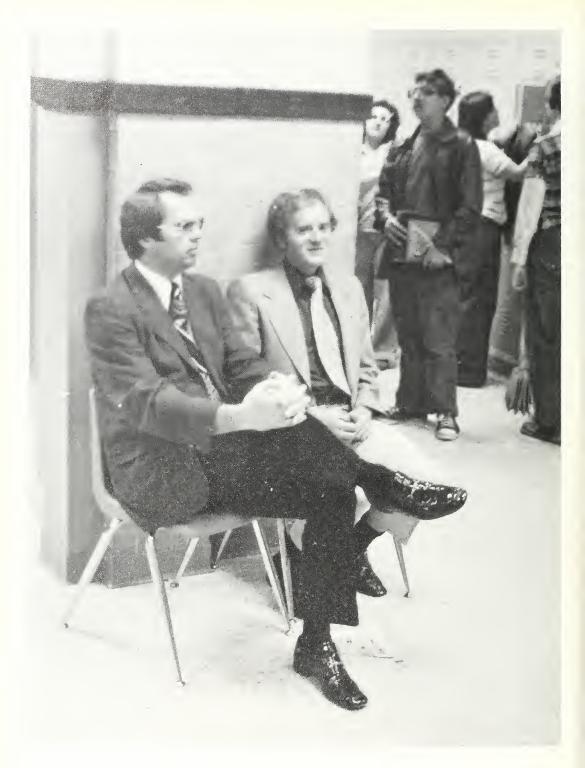

Varsity cheerleaders Mary Behrns, Mary Didier, Carol Werling, Tammy Moreland, Lisa Traylor, and Sandy Miller work on a "two high" mount during cheerleading class.

Senior Doug Jones works on some homework while sitting on a stadium bench.

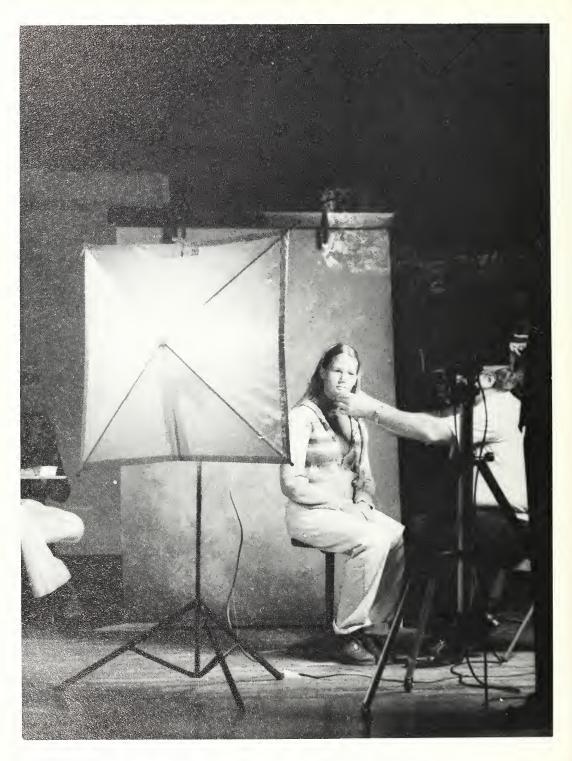

One of the students' favorite places to gather is the wall by the river. Students meet at lunch time, before catching buses, or leaving for jobs and home.

Senior Bruce Habig anticipates a great cross country season as he takes a breathing spell before taking to the track.

Correct timing is an important part of a drummers' job, as he must keep time for the entire marching band.

Dickerson, team proud of record

"We hold the third best season record in the school's history," boasts football Coach Myron Dickerson. The team's Summit Athletic Conference record is 4-2 and the overall record was 7-2. It has been approximately thirty years since a North team won its first five games of the season.

Altogether, the team scored 186 points and rushed for 2,037 yards. According to Coach Dickerson, "The team averaged 20.6 points a game and averaged approximately 230 yards rushing a game." The leading rushers for the team were Steve Nelson, 1048 yards; and Gandy Pruitt, 745 yards. Leading scorers were Nelson, 9 touchdowns; Pruitt, 8 touchdowns; Hale, 3; and Daniels, 3 passes and 1 run.

Junior Stevie Nelson runs the football as his opponent tries to tackle him near the forty-five yard line.

Young Team lands good season

"We were a young team which showed improvement," stated Dean Slavens, coach of the cross country

The team was made up of five seniors, three juniors, and eight sophomores.

Cross country practice started before school in July, the runners covered from 5 to 10 miles each day. Coach Slavens commented that he thought the best runner was Dave Hoagland, who placed All-SAC, as well as 9th in sectionals, and 28th in regionals.

With 16 meets in the season, the varsity squad won six of them and lost ten. The sophomores won two big meets, the Illiana meet and the East Noble meet. Coach Slavens said, "We feel with the fine juniors and sophomores returning we will have a very fine team next vear."

Junior Dave Manning gets clocked in as he finishes his event.

Powers, Traylor pace gymnasts

Mrs. Diane Coles', coach of the gymnastics team was very pleased with the performance of her team.

The strongest gymnasts this year were senior Jan Powers and sophomore Tonya Traylor. They are strong as all-around gymnasts, and junior Phyllis Martin and sophomore Gwen Bohr frequently placed first or second in their events.

There are three different levels in the girls' competition. In the beginning level, the girls competing at this stage were L. Holom, A. Stoiche, P. Welch, D. Didier, J. Werling, and M. Skordos. At the intermediate level were B. Salyer, J. Jeffers, L. Martin, S. Nelson, and K. Athanson. Competing in the optional level were J. Powers, G. Bahr, P. Martin and T. Traylor.

There were two seniors this year who did an outstanding job on the three year old team, they were Jan Powers, all-around; and Sue Nelson, intermediate vault.

A North's gymnast gives her best at the meet against Elmhurst.

Nancy Stoudt is performing her routine on the uneven bars at one of the first meets of the season.

One uneven bar participant displays her gymnastic ability on the uneven bars at Northrop, whose team was ranked Number 1 in the city.

Trying season sets record of 3-7

North's girls basketball team had a trying season with a record of 3 wins and 7 losses. The team's season record hardly says it all for the girls. Every game lost was a close one.

The girls' top scorers were Senior Karen Earl and Junior Angie Dennis. Both were returning from the previous year. Making the varsity squad this year were seniors J. Earl, R. Miller, G. Vonderhaar, C. Mosher, C. Wallace; Juniors A. Dennis, L. Kaiser, S. Harper and sophomores D. Magee, and C. Perry.

In the sectional playoffs, North upset Northrop with a score of 44 to 45, but the girls lost their second game against Leo 60 to 41.

The reserve team played two games, one against Luers and the other against New Haven. Both games were lost.

Senior Geralynn Vonderhaar shoots the ball while Karen Earl is there waiting for the rebound.

Individuals have good season

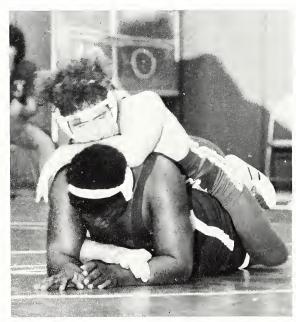

Coach Don Hunter was a little upset with the overall performance of the wrestling team, whose season record came out to 3 wins and 9 losses. Although the team itself didn't have a winning season, some of its wrestlers did. Matt Dager, Todd Nix, Mike Harrington, Tom Kaufman, Dave Trogden, and Brian High all had outstanding records.

"The team put forth a lot of effort practicing two hours a day doing various drills and exercises." stated coach Hunter.

The returning lettermen were High, Leto, Dager, Kaufman, Harrington, Nix, Hunter, and Pugmire.

Team progresses throughout season

This year the reserve team saw a lot of action; they played 20 games out of the season.

The team's starting line-up consisted of Ruff, Booker, Stine, Causey, Brooks, Daniel, Billingsley, and Johnson.

Coach John Stauffer felt the team really progressed well towards the end of the season. The team ended up with a record of 11 wins and 7 losses.

Netters improve during season

"The team improved constantly throughout the season," commented Coach Myron Henderson. He then went on to say, "There were many tie-breaker sets and three-set matches, and the team was far better than the records show."

The varsity roster was made up of five seniors and four juniors. Playing doubles were Stine and Burke, Terrell and Zimmerman, with Kiefer as doubles alternate. Singles players were Lankford, Tarr, Gerardot, and Thomas. The captain was Gregg Tarr.

Team depends on incoming Sophs

Miss Anne Donnelly, coach of the girls' tennis team, had her year cut out for her. With only five players returning from last year, the team's season basically had to depend on the incoming sophomores.

The five returning players included Lynne Barton, Anita Boneff, Lisa Norton, Cindy Overholt, and Geralynn Vonhderhaar.

Last year, the team placed first in sectionals and first in the city. This was a second for the tennis team as they had also placed first in both the previous year. The doubles' team of Debbie Cantwell and Roxanne Love received runner-up at the Doubles State Tourney.

Senior Geralynn Vonderhaar keeps her eyes on the ball while she prepares to return the hit.

Senior Lisa Norton follows through a forehand return. Lisa is also one of five returning for this year's team.

By Hey expected a good season

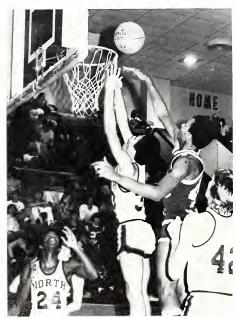

It turned out By Hey didn't have to worry too much about how well the team would do, when they started the season with a 12 game winning streak. North showed how tough they were in the SAC Holiday Tourney, when they beat four city teams in two days and won the tournament.

The leading scorers for the team were Simmons with 22, Nelson with 10, Sweigert with 10, Noel also with 10, and Stanly Powell with 10 points per game.

"I expected a good season this year because of the fine reserve team record of last year—even tho Warrel Simmons was the only returning letterman. Yet I held some reservations, because varsity play is much more challenging." were the comments of Coach By Hey in regards of the overall outlook of the team's season.

Junior Steve Nelson goes in for two, while seniors Barry Chrzan and Warrel Simmons wait for the rebound in the game against South Bend Riley.

Stan Powell, forward, goes up for the basket while being guarded by the opposition.

Warrel Simmons, returning letterman, jumps up for two points at an away game held at Bishop Luers.

Steve Nelson, guard, prepares to pass the ball off to Warrel Simmons, forward, to set the team up for the next basket.

Qualifying rounds choose golf team

"The Golf team is pretty much the same" replied Coach John Stauffer at the beginning of the season. Mr. Stauffer picked his team by qualifying rounds and then determined the individual players with the best scores.

The team practiced at Colonial Oaks, where their home meets were held. The away meets were held at other public golf courses in the Fort Wayne area. The two outstanding lettermen were Senior Gary Lankford, and Junior Brent Overholt.

The two Golf tournaments that the team participated in were the Homestead Invitational and the Riverbend Invitational.

George Sweigert, junior, simulates putting out of a bunker down by the sand banks of the river.

Senior Gary Lankford, one of the returning lettermen, is practicing some putting to get ready for the upcoming tournament.

Shelly VanRyn, Jeff Hale, and Jim Heinze do some warm-up exercises to get in shape for their season, which looks promising.

Strong team makes promising season

"With all the talent on team" stated Coach Mike Morris, "The players were fighting for a starting position.

Returning to the Redskin baseball team were lettermen Shelly VanRyn, Norm Geradot, Matt Dager, Craig Stine, Jim Heinze, Tony Didier, Tim Lytal, and Dale Gossett.

The rest of the team was composed of eighteen sophomores and three transfers from Dwenger. All these helped to make up a promising season for the ball players and Coach Morris.

Last year's season had many close contests, including a 4-3 loss to South Side in the sectionals.

Spikers have trying season

The girls' volleyball team had a trying season although they took most of their meets to three games, they came out with a season's record of three wins and ten losses. They lost in the first round of the sectionals to Carroll.

The Varsity squad was made up of thirteen members: Seven seniors, five juniors, and one sophomore. They practiced every day after school. The reserves practiced on Tuesday and Thursday mornings before school. They had three meets this season but lost to all three of their opponents; New Haven, Harding, and Dwenger.

Next year's team will be picked in the summer, which will give the team more time to practice together.

The first string girls wait and talk over a few tactics as they get ready for their next game.

Many letterwomen return to track

The girls' track team worked hard in training and were well-conditioned. The girls practiced on the track after school every day of the week, with the help of Mr. Orvil Schlatter. They also worked in weight room to build up their strength. Their first meet was against Bishop Luers and Northrop, which were two very tough teams. Coach Diane Cole selected as captain senior Jan Powers. "Jan was really great last year in the Long jump. She took a fourth place in semi-finals, which sent her to state last year.

Returning letterwomen were Seniors Jan Powers, long jump, high jump, 440 Relay, 100 yd. dash; Cindy Mosher, shot putt; Debbie Shoppell 100 yd. dash, 440 relay; juniors Adrian Jackson, mile run; Trinda Zimmerman, mile run; Becky Shaffer, shot putt; Anita Witherspoon, 880 medley relay; Joann Porter, 880 relay and 880 medley relay; and Mary Ann Conrad, hurdles.

Outstanding sophomores were Rita Harrison, long jump, 100 yd. dash; and Barb Hoffman, mile run. Mrs. Cole encouraged the previous Lakeside champions to really get into track this year for more and better experience.

Members of the girls' track team are stretching out at the beginning of track practice as a warm-up exercise.

Male cheerleaders new addition to squad

Mrs. Sherry Gerber, sponsor, and the varsity and reserve cheerleaders showed new ideas such as gymnastics and new boy cheerleaders. Varsity squad was made up of 10 cheerleaders, including the boy cheerleaders, and reserve cheerleaders had two divided squads. The cheerleading clinic turned out very successfully too. Cheerleaders from all over the Fort Wayne Community schools were invited. They participated in cheers, chants, gymnastics, mounts, and different varieties of jumps.

Both of the squads planned all pep sessions for fall and winter sports and spring sports also. The male cheerleaders helped the girls a lot by their ability in gymnastics, supporting the girls on their shoulders for side lines, sink-its, and participating in group cheers and mounts. "They really did a tremendous job this year," commented Mrs. Gerber.

All three squads get together and mount up in an effort to cheer more spirit into the student body during a basketball pep session.

Varsity Cheerleaders (first row) Randy Hosford, Tammy Moreland, Lisa Traylor, Tina Huhn, Sandy Miller, Dave Warner, (second row) Mary Didier, Carol Werling, Mary Berhns, and Anita Witherspoon.

Enthusiasm and spirit is a must when the varsity squad goes onto the floor to show the students how the cheers go.

The faces of seniors Sandy Miller and Mary Didier show how our team is progressing at the moment in a basketball game against Paul Harding.

Cindermen start new season right

Returning lettermen such as seniors Bruce Habig, Dave Hoagland, and Clyde Dial, and juniors Bill Foote, Ken Bodnar, and Dave Manning promised to be valuable assets for this year's track team.

Individuals like Bill Foote, who jumped 22'5" last year to place eighth in the state, did an exceptional job. The team record last year, however, was four wins, winning just two meets.

But the Redskins seemed to be making up for that as they made it look easy with a 72-46 victory over Culver Military Academy in the first meet of the new season, where new indoor records were set for North by Dave Hoagland, clocking 10:15.4 in the 2-mile race; Ken Bodnar with 6'4" in the high jump; and Bill Foote with 21'834" in the long jump.

Club recognizes achievement

The National Honor Society recognizes outstanding achievement among students on the academic level.

One of the most important programs, held in May, is the recognition ceremony. On this day, the valedictorian, salutatorian and high honors students were announced. With this in mind members look forward to the recognition ceremony, and to some, this is one of the most important functions of the school year.

Besides paying dues for membership in the NHS, members of the senior class must have a 9.00 average, juniors 10.00, and sophomores a 11.00 average.

Sophs start strong with peace pipe

The sophomore class, sponsored by Mrs. Sandra Macy, started the year by winning the peace pipe at the first annual pep session, the first time sophomores have ever won. "Most of all the sophomores are involved in their class," observed Mrs. Macy. They planned skits for the pep sessions. The class participated in selling spirit buttons to boost the year. The officers were Randy Hosford, president; John Pepple, vice-president; Tammy McKinney, secretary; and Rita Harrison, social chairman.

Junior girls take powder puff goal

The Junior class did a great job winning the powder puff football game last fall. Mr. Orvil Schalatter is the sponsor with the help of Tony Hines, president; Bill Foote, vice-president; Anita Witherspoon, secretary-treasurer; and Bridgette Logan, social chairman. The activities they had planned was a basketball game between students and faculty. They also helped plan events in the Junior-Senior prom and scheduled different social parties.

Skits, prom bring honors for seniors

The Senior Class, sponsored by Mr. Robert Lovell, worked hard planning skits for the pep session. They were judged for best skits. Students involved are Tina Konger, president; Sue Rich, vice-president; Laura Beck, secretary; and Amy Armstrong, social chairman.

They of course, planned the prom and all the events that go with graduation as well as the Rotund Redskin competition and dance.

Club Council gets charter, goals

Club Council was a new group and consisted of a representative from every one of North Side's clubs. They met the first Monday of every month during school time. The club was directly responsible to Mrs. Dana Wichern and the office.

During the course of the year the club had many goals, the most important of which was to promote an activities program. Their next important job was to set up guidelines for clubs and for the election of class officers.

They were also responsible for promoting school spirit and investigating special projects such as the school store for student council. They kept club accounts and files in order and published COG, a book of clubs, organizations, and groups students can join.

OEA participates in business world

The Office Education Association is made up of members of the COE class and is sponsored by Mrs. Sandra Macy. Fund raising projects included candy and candle selling and car washes.

Their Christmas party introduced parents and employers and helped both groups learn about COE. They also honored their employers at a banquet at the end of the year.

Field trips to Chicago, Lincoln National Bank, and Lincoln Life provided opportunities to tour offices. In regional, state, and national contests, they tested the office skills they had been learning all year on their jobs and in COE class. Non-skilled areas such as job interviews and speech were also practiced.

AFS shows students the ways of others

The American Field Service Club, sponsored by Mrs. Ramona Ransburg, had about 40 active members. They sponsored a potluck in October to which all the local exchange students and their host families, members and their families, and members of the adult chapter were invited. They sold Christmas cards in December and planned some short-term exchanges for later in the year. In June they gave a farewell party for the exchange students. The purpose of the club is for the students to make the exchange students feel welcome at school and to help them out in any possible way.

The AFS exchange student this year is Senior Claudia Viana. Claudia, who is from Brazil, stayed with the Keller family.

AFS Officers: Marianne Miller, Lynne Meyer, David Sommers, Marjorie Smith.

Drama Dept. at work setting new plays

Troupe 2145 continued its efforts to advance drama at North Side during the year. Two new classes of members were initiated into the North Side chapter of International Thespians. The Thespians had some part to play in the production of nine plays during the school year. The year started with the comedy, "The Matchmaker" by Thornton Wilder, and the season ended with the horror mystery of "Frankenstein." Members of the Thespians also helped beginning drama students with their touring shows, which they performed for grade schools.

The summer drama group produced "Liberty Son" in the community, a scene of which is shown here.

Chip Palmeter works independently on the stage to set up the scenery for the play of "The Matchmaker."

Sophomore Andy Gingrich and Senior Gary Lankford read over a play in their drama books for good tone quality.

Afro Club works to promote unity

Afro-Club is made up of about 35 students who learned the unity of the Afro-American Negroes. Mr. Arthur Eldridge was sponsor; Gradlin Pruitt, president; Elaine Murdock, secretary; and Adrienne Jackson, spokesman. This group planned a dance after the Northrop basketball game.

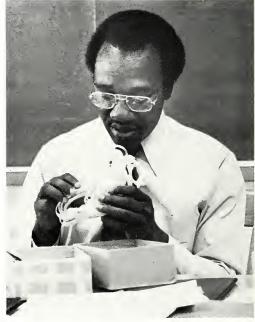

Every year the group participates in Black History and Brotherhood weeks. For these events they make posters showing Black Americans' lives, past and present, and engage different speakers to talk about the black and other races today. They also planned a talent-fashion show and a soul dinner, which is always a popular sell-out. Mr. Eldridge and the members then got a break to visit Cedar Point.

Vocalists train for elite groups

A Cappella Choir members are selected on the basis of a voice test. There are 37 voices from the three grades. It could be said that this is the "average" high school choir.

Troubadours, a select group of junior and senior singers, consists of 40 voices. Membership is by audition only. Singers who are admitted have responsibilities for frequent rehearsals and performances.

Training Choir, made up of 28 sophomores, gives the opportunity for good singing experience and the chance to prepare for the other choral groups that are open by audition only.

Mrs. Holloway and the Varsity Choir rehearse harmonies and timing as they, along with other vocal groups, get ready for a concert.

Auditions needed for select groups

Madrigals, a group of ten singers chosen from Troubadours for their ability to sight-read music, have effective intonation and vocal production. They must also have self-confidence and performance poise to be a member of this select group.

Concert Band, which incorporates the Marching Band organization, is open by audition only and for sophomores that continue in Varsity Band. This group performs the very finest in high school and collegiate band literature.

Orchestra, a select organization with 39 members, consists of all string players and a selected group of wind and percussion players chosen from Concert Band. The group meets for the purpose of studying and performing all kinds of music literature.

Duane Reynolds concentrates on his trumpet, his music, and the direction of the drum majors at the NISBOVA contest.

Jazz, band groups study literature

Varsity Band is a group of all sophomore and beginning band students. They get training and experience in all types of band literature with emphasis on proper band fundamentals.

Wildsiders is a highly selective group with 22 members. This jazz ensemble exists for the purpose of performing the finest jazz literature from the contemporary field.

Stage band is a training group preparing for Wildsiders and learning jazz music.

Varsity prepares for other groups

Varsity Choir, a group with nine members, was given the opportunity for some good singing experiences and to prepare for the auditions to get into the other choral groups.

Helicon shares lit interests

Students who have an interest basically in literature and English are involved in Helicon. The purpose is to promote those interests and discuss the propriate literary topics. The members must have a B average or above to participate, and Mr. Robert Pugh is the sponsor.

The members decided to use drama as their topic. A theater party which was one of their activities. The club also planned a Christmas party at the Byron Health Center and helped take part in the Senior's Farewell Banquet.

Kaliedoscope staff produced 2 issues

Kaliedoscope magazine was produced by Mrs. Kathleen Neuhaus' Literary Magazine class. This is the first year for the class to meet for a full hour. Last year the class met for one of Mrs. Neuhaus' lunch periods. Before that the magazine was published by the Helicon Club.

The class has the responsibility of promoting the magazine and getting material for it. They then choose the pieces to be used, edit and type them, then arrange the magazine. In addition, members of the class also write for the magazine and do the art work that appears in it.

JCL promotes

JCL, or Junior Classical League, sponsored by Mr. Ward Beckley, consists of 20-25 members which meet on Wednesday morning and afternoon. The main objectives are friendship, activity for students interested in Latin, and furthering their interest in classics and antiquities.

The students attended many activities. Some of them were the Saturnalia, which is the Roman analogue of Christmas; the Baccanalia, the Roman analogue of Spring; the Festum Romanum, a city-wide meeting of Latin students in their togas at IU-Purdue; and a field trip to Chicago to see King Tut's artifacts.

Service workers give needed help

Mrs. Dana Wichern and the other administrators and office workers used about thirty service workers, who kept them organized by running errands, picking up attendance cards, and filing paper materials. It is necessary to have student help and it gives students a chance to participate in the workings of the school, says Mrs. Wichern. The activities they had planned this year was a Christmas Festival in the Deans' Office and a special thank you for the workers and a get-together luncheon in the spring.

Volleyball Club improves skills

The two-year old volleyball club consisted of 30 members, who met every Tuesday and Thursday morning in the large gym area. They went over basic skills and worked on improving their game. Also, with the help of their sponsor, Mr. Ry Taliaferro, the club played several games of volleyball, dividing its members into the teams. In doing this, members had the fun of competing in a sport they enjoyed and bettering their skills.

Competing in teams is one way of learning the basic fundamentals of volleyball and having some fun at the same time.

Practicing the various ways of getting the ball over the net is an important part of the club, as it gives students a chance to improve.

Junior Beth Watson gives the ball a backwards try in an effort to win the game.

Sponsor Ry Taliaferro stands off to the side to watch to see if everyone is using the correct skills or if they need more practice.

FSA promotes secretary skills

With the help of sponsor Mrs. Irma Johnson, the Future Secertaries Association developed a better understanding of the business world. The members took part in Tawasi dinners and sold stationery to raise money for the club. Also, with the assistance of Mrs. Lill Mabri and Mrs. Sharon Huff, members of NSA arranged special programs for the club. Members hope to have a secretarial profession one day.

Radio group goal is broadcasting

With fifteen members, the Radio Club visited area radio stations with the understanding that one day they will get their licenses and become broadcasting announcers.

Members devoted their time and enjoyed learning how to become a radio announcer. They also have upgraded the morning announcements and speeded a new interest in the art of communicating electronically.

The main goal of the Radio Club is to eventually establish a radio station owned and operated by students at North Side.

Public speakers compete to learn

The National Forensic League sponsored by Mrs. Claryn Myers, worked very hard on their contests. The students participated to learn how to speak in public and for other social speaking

Every Saturday during the year for about five months was used to travel to other schools in the area for competition. The speech team competed as a team and also as individuals. Mrs. Mevers worked with the individuals after school for more practice. At the end of the year the Speech Club had an awards dinner.

Mr. Jon Bill, the sponsor of the Machine Maintenance Club, hopes to satisfy student interest in learning about machine maintenance and repair. There were six members. General meetings were once a month or sometimes more often, if it was necessary. The work they have done was displayed by the machine maintenance area. They also maintained and repaired the metal shop and working of the machine and equipment on which they prepared their projects.

Council events include films

Student Council along with Mrs. Kathaline Neuhaus, spent a lot of hours doing their job. Mrs. Neuhaus had been given an hour a day to work Student Council students. They spent much more than that though planning the projects that turned out very successfully. The club made some outstanding achievements, such as the educational week and the film-service that brought in several good films.

Student Council, with the help of the entire school gave almost $1000 for projects. They have divided themselves into different committees such as the social, service, interior, and public relations. From these committees they planned several activities including Homecoming, Spirit Week, Spring Sports Week, Law Week, Leadership Days, Christmas Films, Film Service to various classes, Grandparents' Day, Student Exchanges and Come-Care-Communicate Center. The officers were Matt Henry, president; and Sandy Miller, secretary-treasurer; Shelly Van-Ryn, Vice-President. "These students have done a fine job," Mrs. Neuhaus commented.

Members of the student council listen as the president, Matt Henry, talks about upcoming events.

Hard work, practice make good show

Ripplettes is an old tradition here. For many years girls have joined this club and produced the annual Spring Water Show. The tradition is carried on as the 15-member club, sponsored by Mrs. Susan Boesch, practices and plans their show. This year's theme was "Songs from Sesame Street." But Ripplettes isn't all fun. It also requires hard work and practice. Most girls have never tried synchronized swimming before they join the club, so the first move is to teach the newcomers the basic skills they'll need. Next comes the afterschool practices twice a week to learn and perfect their routines. And finally in April all their work pays off as they show off their talent through their show.

The Ripplettes started their water show expedition last year before a good turnout.

Media assistants serve in 2 areas

The Media Center assistants work in both the audiovisual and library areas. These students are expected to become familiar with all the instructional media, the arrangement of the media, and how to utilize materials and equipment. Audiovisual students work mainly on tape recorders, cameras, and film projector equipment. Library workers arrange the book shelves and put books in order by the card catalog. Both library and audiovisual assistants' help is vital to the smooth functioning of the Media Center, say the sponsors, Mr. Ted Crum and Mrs. Carolyn Zehner.

Key Club helps inside and out

Members of the Key Club provided various services around the school. When needed they ushered for basketball games and other special activities. Outside the school they sponsored bingo parties for the old folks' home. Being a member meant having to be available for any activities needed by the school. They also had fund-raising projects for which they gave the money to different societies around the community.

Redbuds' spirit grows with games

"The Redbuds" hockey club were in their second season this year. The team consisted of 18 players and their sponsor and coach, Mr. Fred Humphrey. The Redbuds played 17 games plus the playoffs at Gunner Elliot Ice Arena. There was no charge for the fans that came to watch the Redbuds skate on to a victory.

When Mr. Humphrey was asked if there were any sacrifices he had to make to sponsor the team he replied that "The team's enthusiasm makes time and effort seem insignificant."

Psychology Club studied behavior

Members of the Psychology Club covered various fields of psychology. With the help of sponsors Mr. Ward Beckley and Mrs. Wilma Ashe, members made Bio-Rhythm charts and discussed how to understand human behavior, and different theories of personality development.

They also took a trip to the new Mental Health Center to take a look at mental treatment and see how advanced the new facilities have come. Throughout the year members studied E.S.P., telepathys and psyschokinesis, and the strange field of psychokinetics.

Gold Diggers get 6-0 triumph

The juniors' powder puff football team, the Gold Diggers, were victorious over the senior girls by a score of 6-0, The juniors' touchdown was scored by Melaine Ranly on the second play of the game. A second touchdown was scored by the junior girls but was called back due to clipping. Junior class president Tony Hines also gave credit to Merilee Conn. "She was a great defensive lineman. Stopped 'em every time."

The girls started practice two weeks before the game under the guidance of head coach Bill Foote and coaches Alvin Wells, Roland Allison, Stevie Nelson, and Brian Konger. They worked out after school for approximately an hour and a half.

The final touch was added by cheerleaders Derek Booker, Dan Quigly, Dan Henry, Terry Smith, and Mike Borton, who cheered the team to victory while wearing old pom-pom outfits, complete with balloons.

Journalists begin to work in summer

Work for the Northerner began early. Three weeks before the rest of us reported for school, the Northerner chief editor Cindy Overholt and her department editors began producing the first issue of the paper. Cindy was chosen by the outgoing editor and advisor Miss Norma Thiele. She in turn chose the rest of the editors on the staff. Writers were recruited from the Journalism classes and students who volunteered their time. Each editor assigned stories in his area with all final decisions on what material would be used made by the editor-in-chief. At the end of the semester the editors switched jobs in order to give everyone maximum experience. The staff also rotated during the year. The Northerner was financed through subscriptions and advertising.

Junior Tony Didier passes out Northerners to students sent from each first period class. Each student must sign his name before picking up the papers.

Junior Rhonda Gipson goes over the copy for her section, after which it will be typed and sent to the print shop.

D.E. members study business careers

The Distribution Education Club of America is a program where students learn about the business world.

D.E. students study different careers in business and have a chance to get a job in the field of their choice, with some help from their sponsor, Mr. Richard Irving.

During class students cover the fundamentals of advertising, merchandising, sales promotion, and other kings of business. Students also sold candy to support their activities and the contests they enter throughout the year. Distribution Marketing is a Junior class of D.E.

Students in this club are introduced to marketing and the various kinds of business. They learn how people started their own business and what free enterprise is all about. They sold candy to pay for fees in the contests they entered throughout the year.

Cheerblock brings spirit to games

Members of the Cheerblock and their spirit were there to back North Side during basketball season. Any student could be in this club. With the help of the cheerleaders, the Cheerblock learned new cheers and chants, and members enjoyed being part of the excitement. The only requirements were to have a good loud voice, know how to yell, and have enough spirit to push the team on to victory.

With smiling faces and clapping hands, members of the cheerblock encourage the basketball team.

Standing frequently, urging others to do so, and participating in all organized cheers are part of their regular routine. They also plan further activities during time outs on the floor.

Mrs. Sherri Gerber and Mrs. Kathleen Neunaus discuss future spirit plans during a pep session. Both teachers have a lot to do with the enthusiastic spirit of the students.

Shop talk seems to be the topic here as a parent and Mr. Jon Bill have a discussion in one of the Industrial Arts class rooms on Back To School Night.

Legend ideas begin year in advance

Each yearbook is produced by the combined efforts of staff members from journalism classes and volunteers, along with a student editor and the adviser. This year's editor, Gay Lynn Culbertson, with Miss Norma Thiele as adviser, began planning as early as April of the previous year. The out-going editor chooses the new leader and together with the staff he reviews the old yearbook and begins plans on the new. By the time school is out the number of pages, content, and theme are planned and even some of the pictures have been taken.

The editors of the book then attend a two-week summer workshop to make more detailed plans. Upon their return to school the staff begins to gather information and material. Faculty members are consulted for the academic and club sections but all material used is student writing. Staff members sell subscriptions and advertising, work during the taking of underclass pictures, and sell plastic book covers to help finance the yearbook.

Senior Gay Lynn Culbertson, the editor of the Legend, works on the layouts and proofreads copy for the latest edition.

Junior Anita Witherspoon works on her layout and uses other materials to help crop pictures for the yearbook.

Part of the work on the 1977 Legend involved research for the fifteeth anniversary section.

Some students don't seem to mind when they don't have a desk to study on.

Pam Jones and Kevin Blunt take time to share a smile before going to class.

Students relax and talk with friends while gathering for an assembly.

Senior Tom Williams preaches "The Gospel Truth" to amused class.

Sophomore Class President Randy Hosford, who also doubles as a cheerleader, poses for a mug shot at lunch.

John Regendanz and Brenda Watson tell about college life during higher education day.

Sheriff "Bud" Meeks explains to students what his department does at an assembly during Law Week.

People and events enrich student life

Special visits from prominent people in the community and special events such as films presented by the Student Council Film Service helped enrich students' knowledge of things happening around them.

Visitors such as Dr. Elberger, Congressman Dan Quayle, and Mayor Robert Armstrong, and events like this year's Law Week gave students' a chance to formulate their own views and become more aware of their rights and privileges.

Republican Dan Quayle stopped at North Side to express his views on why he should be elected to congress.

Mayor Robert Armstrong also spoke to students during Law Week.

Parents listen intently on Back to School Night as Mr. King explains how he conducts his classes.

Living it Up

Fun. That is what students, in years to come, will remember about their years at North. Oh, of course we'll remember our homework and our classes, but it will be the good times we had that will bring the smile.

We'll remember those snowball fights in the parking lot, the dance where we danced with that certain someone, the games, and those exciting pep sessions all those special moments which passed all too quickly.

Juniors Sarah Mohas and Bill Morken share some of their cake during a mock wedding in fifth period human development class.

Junior Greg Nichols doesn't appear to be getting his message across to this obviously uninterested student.

Senior Dave Graney seems to have more on his hands than he can handle.

Senior Tim Zimmerman, Alias "The Fonz" gives us the cool look.

Senior Sandy Miller takes aim, but the snowball never reaches junior Tony Didier.

Year may end but memories won't

This year, which seemed to arrive so quickly, is now over, all too soon.

But although this year has come to a close, we will not forget those happy times we had here. We will remember how we walked the halls before morning classes, stopping to chat with friends, or hunting for the certain face in the crowd, and all the nights we got home hours after school had been dismissed because of practicing.

No, we will not forget our years here at North, or the good times we had. And even though we sometimes hated school, we know that we are better people now, than when we first entered North Side's doors.
